

CHILDREN IN THE CUBE

SOME GUIDELINES

The Cube is a brilliant place for kids to come and learn how to climb. As an activity, bouldering is a fantastic way of getting some exercise and having a great time. Staff should be well trained in getting the best from children's groups.

However, The Cube has a number of basic guidelines for anybody who wants to bring children to climb on our walls. These are as follows...

- Children may climb at The Cube under the supervision of a qualified instructor in a kids session or by their parents/guardians provided that the supervising adult is a competent climber and a registered member of The Cube. If you wish to become a member you must either be an experienced climber, or have completed our adult induction session.
- Parents/guardians who are members may only sign in 2 children per person. This is because it is hard to keep your eyes on two children at a time, let alone any more!
- The Cube staff reserve the right to limit the number of children climbing in the centre at busy times. If in doubt, try and avoid bringing small children at busy times (e.g. wet weekend afternoons, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings) or get people to call before leaving home to check if the centre is too busy or not.
- Children aged under 14 years of age may not climb at The Cube unsupervised at any time.
- Children between the ages of 14 and 18 years of age may climb unsupervised at The Cube, providing that they have a Junior membership (requires written parental consent, and to have completed a safety assessment with a member of our staff.)
- Atlantis and The Cube staff reserve the right to eject from our premises any customers whose behaviour jeopardises their safety or the safety of others. In the event this should ever be necessary, customers would not be entitled to any refund. Please, climb safely, and be aware of other climbers.
